

LEADING AND DEVELOPING OTHERS

Leadership takes persistence, consistent pursuit of professional development

Strong leadership skills are essential for anyone who manages others. Skills can always be refined and improved, regardless of your level in your agency.

The key skills for any successful leader include:

- Coaching skills to develop others
- Leading a diverse team by establishing meaningful coaching relationships with each of your direct reports
- Assessing the performance of each employee, setting expectations, and creating a development path to enable them to reach their highest potential

More information on professional development and other valuable resources are available to exempt employees and IT professionals via Learning on Demand.
