EXTENSION OF PROBATIONARY PERIOD

GUIDELINES

- Review the applicable Bargaining Unit Agreement to ensure contract compliance.

- Consult with agency Human Resources and next level of management before extending a probationary period. Certain collective bargaining agreements have restrictions on extensions of probationary periods. Some contracts may allow for certain extension(s) of the probationary period. Check with the Office of Collective Bargaining before proceeding.

- Extensions of probation are only approved for very limited reasons, usually involving circumstances where there has not been adequate opportunity to evaluate the employee in significant aspects of job performance. For example, an employee underwent a change of supervisor during the probationary period and the new supervisor has not had enough time to evaluate the work.

- Extensions are not intended for situations where a decision cannot be made.

- Performance evaluations should be performed at the employee’s mid-probationary and end probationary points pursuant to the agency’s Performance Management Policy. “In no event shall the time period covered by the probationary period and any extensions exceed a total of one year in length” (OAC 123:1-19-02(E)).

- An employee must consent “prior to the end of the employee’s normal probationary period or the end of the first extension, as applicable” (OAC 123:1-19-02(E)). Please use the consent form on page 2 below.

- Submit the signed consent form along with the reason(s) the extension is necessary to DAS via eperformance@das.ohio.gov. Please model your email after the example on page 3 below.

- After careful review, a decision will be provided to you as soon as possible.
